EIGHTH OF OCTOBER NEXT, And following days, the very extensive and valuable DRAMATIC LIBRARY OF THE LATE

WM. E. BURTON, Esq., The Eminent Comedian.

The collection comprises an immense assemblage of books re-lating to the stage, including interesting specimens of the early English drama, exceeding in extent any collection that has ever been submitted to the public competition, commencing with the earliest dawn of histrionic art, and brought down to the present time. Among these will be found the first four folio Shakes pearss, and seventy other editions—also, about 1,500 vols. of Stakesp ariann—an unrivaled collection of books of wit and hu-mor—a complete series of the history of the stage, containing music, pageants, etc.—old English poetry of the Elizabethan era, including all the cottemporaries of Shakespeare. Indeed, the col-lection is at once magnificent and unique, and offers to buyers a rare opportunity of collecting books not to be obtained except in The dispersion of private collections.

The Catalogue, which comprises nearly 500 pages, is now ready, and may be had of the Auctioneer, or will be malled free on ree ipt of 65 cents in postage stamps.

WHAT EVERYBODY SAYS

Is, that there is something for everybody in THE HOUSE HOLD JOURNAL, and only Three Cents.

WHAT DOES THE "TRIBUNE" SAY?

It says (Sept. 20): "The Honsehold Journal is a very hand-one new paper of 16 quarte sages. It is not only very hand-one but very interesting, and filled with matter well suited for family

WHAT THE "EVENING POST" SAYS

It says (Sept. 21): "The first number of the Household Journal promises well. A wise discrimination is made in this attempt to sait the public taste, and we do not find the trashy, sensational style of writing that has of late become pairfully prevalent in some of the se-called literary journals. The Household Journal, we are informed, is backed by capital, and has every prospect of achieving permanent popularity."

WHAT DOES THE "TIMES" SAY

r It says (Sept 22): "The Houshold Journal is exemplary in typography, abounding in fresh and original matter, and, what is of especial moment, characterized by the utmost parity and salu you follow and taste. The publishers, in offering this budget of wholesome novelty, arbieve an additional triumph in presenting it at the low price of *1 50 a year."

WHAT DOES THE "SUN" SAY

It says (Sept. 24): "A glance at The Household Journal moves us to note that it is one of the most tasteful periodicals in appearance that we remember seeing. Its promises are high and pure, its contents are extremely varied, instructive, and entertaining, and its energetic and liberal business enterprise bespeaks determination to succeed. It is as cheap as can be—we hope not cheaper—and will pay the buyer well."

WHAT THE "HOME JOURNAL" SAYS.

Referring to The Housebold Journal, it says (Sept. 20): "Its pages are devoted to information, amusement, and domestic economy, and in every respect the paper adapts itself to that purity and morality of tone which will make it a favorite in the ran ily circle. In this particular it will differ from some of its cotemperaries, which are filled with a kind of writing that necessarily excludes them from every honest and intelligent household. This journal, in its form, general appearance, and the reading natter it contains, is deserving of commendation. Many of the original articles are admirable, and the editorial department evinces a scholarly mind. We cordially welcome this new can didate for literary honors to the world of journalism, and wish it all prosperity."

From The Evening Post.

"So far as we know this is the first manual of the kindthe first general survey of the literature of all nations and all ages intended as a book of reference and for popular readingthat has been produced in our long tage. Mrs. Botte has produced a work which is valuable as a panoramic survey of all that the human mind has accomplished in its noblest department of activity. We have universal histories, which are a record of wars and revolutions of changes of government and of the succession of dynastics; this book is the universal history of man's cultivated intellect—a record of triumbles achieved by the reach and the imagination in all lands and all ages of the world.

"If is especially worthy of the attention of teachers, as admitably futed to be need as a class-book in schools. Not so conclea as to be dry, nor extended to prolivity, it is instructive and interesting, and will give the scholar an admirable view of general likebuture. Its merits are of a high order, being the fruit of many years' straty and great familiarity with the subject so successfully treated.

"A distinguished author of our own times has said, 'Reason leads to faith.' The present volume has its elements in that thought. Its origin is in the conviction that something beyond what is already extant, is needed by the reading public, and we precially by the young, the reflective and aspiring minds of the age, in evidence of the Uneness of Truth—the harmonies of Nature and Revelation, and in presentation of the course pursued does not less sight of this, and is thus satural and obvious."—[Extract from Preface.
